

ROYAL CHRISTENING—Princess Elizabeth holds her infant daughter Princess Anne at christening ceremony in Buckingham Palace. At right is King George, the new Princess' grandfather, and in center is Princess Margaret, the infant's aunt. Baby's full name is Anne Elizabeth Alice Louise of Edinburgh.

(AP) Wirephoto by Radio from London

Royal Infant Christened Princess Anne

LONDON, Oct. 21 (AP) — The 67-day-old daughter of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip was Christened Anne Elizabeth Alice Louise of Edinburgh today by the Archbishop of York.

She will be known simply as Princess Anne.

The baby is third in line of succession to the British throne. Her mother, Princess Elizabeth, is first, followed by Anne's 2-year-old brother Charles.

Wears Historic Gown

She was dressed in a white satin christening gown covered with rare Honiton lace. The gown is more than a century old and was ordered by Queen Victoria and Prince Albert.

The archbishop, Dr. Cyril F. Garbett, performed the ceremony in the music room of Buckingham Palace before the royal family.

Little Anne was driven over from her parents' home, nearby Clarence House, in Princess Elizabeth's new Daimler limousine.

Charles Responds

She sat in the front seat on the lap of her nurse. Charles waved at photographers. He sat behind with his mother and father. The latter, Philip, Duke of Edinburg, a lieutenant commander in the navy, had flown home from Malta to be present.

The royal baptismal font, made of silver overlaid with gold, had been brought in from Windsor Castle earlier in the week. It rested on a plinth draped in crimson velvet. There were decorations of pink and white flowers: lilies of the valley, white heather and white carnations massed with pink tuberoses.